Dear Colleagues,

India is a 'young' country, with children and adolescents comprising a large share of our population. These children are our treasure as well as our responsibility. It is hence imperative for all health care providers to be conversant with their special needs.

All radiologists while evaluating children in their clinical practice would have realized not only the special skills required in handling them, but also experienced the ever lurking guilty voice of radiation exposure and often the distinct disease spectrum, which affects the paediatric population. Also, the training in paediatric radiology in our country has not received enough attention relative to several other established sub-specialities of radiology.

This imaging course attempts to address most of the key issues required by students and radiologists for imaging evaluation of children. We look forward to your active participation in the academic programme.
